

Welcome back to a celebration of what's right with the world !!

The leader is always at the apex of an organisation - be it a corporate, social or a non-profit. There is the leader, and there is the team that supports the leader. While the mandate of a leader is to deliver optimal and transformational results, how they are accomplished is a function of the team process.

This issue of Sattva covers both ends of the spectrum. In the Case Study, Dr. Sunil Maheshwari elaborates on the entrepreneurial leadership style of the iconic Steve Jobs. The research study on Team Development by Dr. Ashutosh P Bhupatkar delineates the demands that the new age organizational teams place on the various stakeholders involved.

Case Study

Steve Jobs – The Entrepreneurial Leader

Dr. Sunil Maheshwari

There are leaders and then there are entrepreneurial leaders. It takes deep conviction and intrinsic belief in one's own ability to break rules and create products that bedazzle the world.

The author dissects Steve Jobs' entrepreneurial leadership as compared to the conventional numbers-driven leadership. More.

Research Study

Team Development

By Dr. Ashutosh P Bhupatkar

As modern organizations become ever more agile and jobs increasingly complex, time-bound, and global in scope, it is no longer possible for one person to perform a single job or task.

Accordingly, the new organizational roles being created tend to be team-oriented. More.
